Telling the Truth

Any salesman or saleswoman who knowingly misrepresents the value of any article will be immediately discharged. This has long been the unalterable rule of "The Big Store" and the result is that such misrepresentation does not occur. This fixed policy of telling the truth about values has helped to make "The Big Store" the success it is. People come here with the absolute confidence shown by the child who implicitly believes that which its father or mother tells it. "If the Greenhuts say so, it 1S so," is the feeling we want the American public to have toward "The Big Store." It pays to deal with men who consider money, the product of toil, as a sacred thing, not lightly to be dealt with.
